A HEALTHY FUTURE

Winter 2015 Celebrating extraordinary care made possible through your generous gifts

The power of philanthropy

David A. Thompson and his family are transforming their community. The president and CEO of TEC Equipment, Inc., and member of the Meridian Park Medical Foundation board of trustees, has pledged $5 million to ignite the campaign for a new Patient Care Enhancement Project at Legacy Meridian Park Medical Center.

"Legacy Meridian Park is in my neighborhood, and since 1973, they have consistently delivered great care for my family and our community," says Thompson.

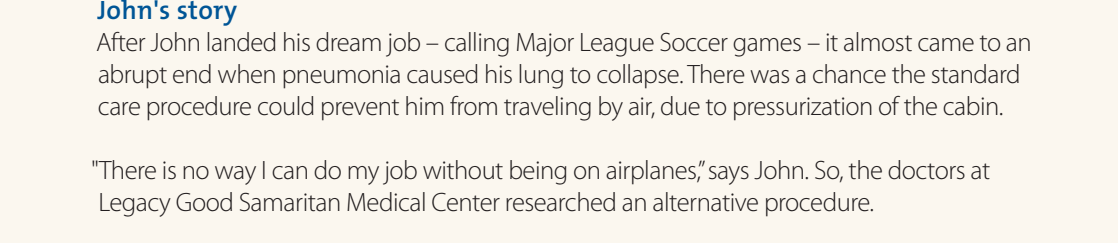

This generous gift will help cover the cost of constructing and furnishing a new medical/surgical patient care facility, as well as providing program support. Legacy Health will name the facility after the Thompson family.

"We've been extremely fortunate with our family business and trust this gift will help provide a needed and sustainable service to our community," says Thompson. All three of Thompson's sons have joined his company – TEC Equipment, a truck and trailer dealership group, the largest operation of its kind in the western United States.

Giving back to the community, and Legacy Health, is a family value Thompson has instilled in his children. His son, David O., is a member of the Emanuel Medical Center Foundation board of trustees, and son, Chris, is on the board of the Good Samaritan Foundation. Together, the Thompson family is helping ensure excellent health care for generations to come.

Recognizing outstanding care

Donna Wilcox and the Strong family — John, Jacob and Nicole

A caring trifecta

John Strong had an intense fear of hospitals. "When I was around a hospital, I would get a pit in my stomach," he says. But, after a series of medical emergencies at three Legacy Health hospitals, he now feels different. "I love the people we've come across at Legacy, and have been continually impressed by how good the care is, both medically and person-to-person," says John.

John's story

After John landed his dream job – calling Major League Soccer games – it almost came to an abrupt end when pneumonia caused his lung to collapse. There was a chance the standard care procedure could prevent him from traveling by air, due to pressurization of the cabin.

"There is no way I can do my job without being on airplanes," says John. So, the doctors at Legacy Good Samaritan Medical Center researched an alternative procedure.

"They did the surgery and two weeks later I was calling a Timbers game," says John, "I'm on an airplane every single week and I've never felt anything – they did a remarkable job."

Donna's story

"Legacy has brought my mom's trust back to hospitals," says John's wife, Nicole Strong. Her mother, Donna Wilcox, was on a waitlist for a third kidney transplant with little hope because of her complex medical history. Nicole – at the time, a youth soccer coach – was waiting one day for a player's father to pick up his daughter. Nicole asked her, "What does your dad do?" Her father was Thomas Batiuk, M.D., Ph.D. – a kidney transplant nephrologist with Legacy Transplant Services.

"That one opportunity with Dr. Batiuk changed everything," says Donna. Dr. Batiuk told Nicole about the Alliance for Paired Donation program. It fit her family's situation – a daughter who wants to give her kidney to her mom, but is not a match.

So, Nicole gave her healthy kidney to a man in Michigan and Donna received a kidney from a young Michigan woman. "I've had a lot of experiences with hospitals and the only one I would recommend is a Legacy hospital," says Donna.

Nicole's story

Nicole was healthy when she became pregnant, despite having just one kidney. But, at 32-weeks, both her weight and blood pressure spiked. She had preeclampsia. Although, unrelated to her kidney donation, her doctors felt a need to be proactive.

Because of their previous experiences, John knew "she's going to be just fine because they know what they're doing," he says. She was admitted to Legacy Emanuel Medical Center – ideal for high-risk births since it is steps from the neonatal intensive care unit (NICU) at Randall Children's Hospital.

Baby Jacob arrived, small but otherwise healthy, weighing four pounds, four ounces. "The people who work there are saints, they truly are," says John.

Recognizing outstanding care

Giving back

When tragedy struck Mike Zupan's family in August 2011, he pulled together with his wife, Kendra, to build something positive, not just for their family, but also for the community to honor his father, John Zupan. "My father touched a lot of people in our community. He was one of those figures who was bigger than life and knew a lot of people," says Mike.

John Zupan, the founder of Zupan's Markets, was riding his motorcycle when a car pulled out in front of him. He was transported to Legacy Emanuel Medical Center in critical condition. "I tell everybody about the unbelievable care that was given to him – it touched us, what we saw in that short period of time," says Mike.

Wanting to raise awareness of the first-class trauma services at Legacy Emanuel, the family established the John J. Zupan Foundation. Their Foundation has raised over $500,000 to support Legacy Zupan's Trauma Services, one of only two Level 1 trauma centers in Oregon. According to Mike, the exceptional skill, care and compassion of the trauma team is a huge asset to the community. "Not everyone knows that," says Mike, "I think if you've been there, you've seen it, you've lived it, you know that."

The Foundation's flagship event is the John J. Zupan Memorial Golf Tournament – established in 2012 and sold out every year since. The tournament brings together Legacy's community of doctors and hospital staff with the Zupan's customers, friends and vendors; culminating with a dinner and auction. "Food is just part of our life," says Mike, "It's a great mix of people – some who knew my father very well and some who knew him just in passing."

The 2015 John J. Zupan Memorial Golf Tournament is slated for Sept. 18, 2015.

Opportunities to make a difference

A place for families

As a regional trauma center, Legacy Emanuel Medical Center receives patients, daily, in need of highly specialized care after suffering a serious injury or illness. A significant number of these patients must stay at Legacy Emanuel for weeks or months. The Emanuel Family House will make it possible for families of patients to have close, safe, affordable lodging in a supportive environment.

Twice the hope

CARES Northwest, a community-based medical program, assesses, treats and prevents child abuse in one child-friendly location. The Maybelle Clark Macdonald Fund awarded CARES Northwest a $100,000 challenge grant to match each new gift of $1,000 or more with $1,000. This challenge runs through Dec. 31, 2015. To double your impact, contact Lynn Hallbacka, associate director of development at Randall Children's Hospital Foundation, at 503-276-9495 or lhallbacka@lhs.org.

Building pathways

Legacy Good Samaritan Medical Center is transforming patient care with a groundbreaking approach to Emergency Care through three specialized pathways – Oregon's first combined Emergency Care/Department/Urgent Care Center, the West Coast's only Senior Care Pathway and a Behavioral Health Unit. The redesign will also feature a new, well-marked Emergency Department entrance.

Circles of support

Legacy Mount Hood Medical Center is building a new, state-of-the-art surgical outpatient center to house a comprehensive digestive disease program. Generous gifts will make it possible for Legacy Mount Hood to save and improve the lives of patients with digestive diseases. You can celebrate this enhancement to the East County community by becoming part of the "Circles of Support" donor wall.
