For you, your practice and our community

Legacy Health Partners (LHP) is here to help providers adapt to the changes in health care. We are collaborating with providers to achieve the “Triple Aim” — better care, better health and lower cost. We also want to do more, adding a goal of improved provider job satisfaction and engagement. The addition of this goal is part of what has been coined the “Quadruple Aim.”

Toward that aim, LHP provides an opportunity for providers to actively shape their future. In turn, we hope you will be more satisfied, your practice more successful and the community healthier.

What is Legacy Health Partners?

A clinically integrated network some 2,500 members strong, LHP is a provider-led partnership of independent private practice providers, Legacy Medical Group and Legacy Health.

Legacy Health Partners is unique in that it allows providers to practice in their chosen model. Three-quarters of LHP’s members are independently practicing providers serving patients across a wide geographic area.

The goal of Legacy Health Partners is “delivering value and improving health.” The keys to achieving this are collaboration and a shared focus on quality delivered through a coordinated, clinically integrated network.

What makes a clinically integrated network successful?

- The collective commitment by providers to enhancing performance on a set of meaningful performance measures.
- An operational infrastructure to help providers be successful. This support includes staff, provider-led governance, data and technology, and in-clinic consultation.

- The ability to negotiate favorable performance-based contracts that recognize the value of better health across a population.

“Regardless of the type of practice you have, success in the next few years will be defined differently from how it has been in the past. The LHP network provides a platform for providers to actively shape their future.”
