February 2017 Newsletter

Have you checked out PsycArticles yet?

Last month Legacy Library added a new database to its collection, called PsycARTICLES. PsycARTICLES includes dozens of journals focused on psychiatry, psychology, psychopharmacology, and related topics, and includes thousands of full text articles from journals published by the American Psychological Association.

Articles from this psych collection will now appear in your results when you use Legacy OneSearch, or you can search for a specific journal using FullText Finder. Or contact one of our medical librarians for one-on-one help searching for the latest research in the behavioral health sciences.

And don’t forget that Legacy Library also offers electronic Table of Contents service for these journals. Sign up today and receive an email whenever new content is published.

Signing up for Table of Contents just got easier

If you are new to the Legacy Library's Table of Contents, you may want to watch our new video tutorial about how to get the most from the service. This quick video will guide you through the process of signing up. Get started today and begin receive emails with the latest health care research! View the tutorial online.

Looking for ABOG resources?

If you are an OB/GYN participating in the Maintenance of Certification program from the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology (ABOG), you can find the most current reading lists on the library website. These lists directly link to the articles through Legacy Library’s resources, allowing you to get the articles quickly and easily. The website also includes an archive of previous reading lists going back to 2013. Visit the ABOG page to download the reading lists.
Listen to podcasts from NEJM, JAMA and more

Several of the journals that Legacy Library subscribes to include audiovisual and multimedia resources, including podcasts.

New England Journal of Medicine has two podcasts: NEJM This Week is published on Wednesdays, and highlights the journal’s most recent articles NEJM Interviews is a weekly discussion about current health care topics with medical professionals.

JAMA also has several podcasts, including its newest, JAMA Professionalism: Best Practice. Using actual medical cases, this podcast highlights how clinicians handle challenging clinical situations. JAMA also publishes the JAMA Clinical Reviews and JAMA Author interviews podcasts. The JAMA subspecialties such as JAMA Cardiology, JAMA Pediatrics and more also feature podcasts on their topics.

Check out these podcasts as well:

- Journal of Clinical Oncology Podcast
- The Lancet Oncology

What’s new in e-journals

A new year brought new journals from Sage Publishing to the Legacy Library collection. Here are a few of our most recent titles from Sage:

- Women’s Health
- JDR Clinical & Translational Research
- Scars, Burns & Healing
- HAND
Check out the newest CME courses available online

Earn CME credit at your convenience with CME On Demand. This service provides an opportunity for you to watch previously recorded live CME activities and obtain CME credit.

Recent programs include “Prevention of Opioid Addiction and Overdose Deaths after Trauma” by James Peck, MD, “Pediatric Guideline Adherence and Outcomes in Traumatic Brain Injury” by Monica Vavilala, MD, as well as several of the presentations from the Excellence in Breast and Gynecologic Care conference.

Find more CME On Demand programs here.

Upcoming CME and Library Events

February 16, 12 p.m. – Pediatric Emergency Grand Rounds (Emanuel)

March 3, 7 a.m. – Ophthalmology Grand Rounds (Good Samaritan)

March 8, 7 a.m. – Language Barriers and Patient Safety (Mt. Hood)

March 9-10 – Health Literacy Conference

March 22, 12 p.m. – Oncology Grand Rounds (Good Samaritan)

May 5 – 6th Annual Pediatric Emergency and Critical Care Medicine Conference (Red Lion Jantzen Beach)

For a full list of CME activities, click here.